1. A new underground depot has been constructed approximately 300 meters north of the barracks of the Border Guard unit in Dospat village (N 41-39, E 24-10), Devin Okoliya, and about 300 meters east of the Dospat-Peshtera road, at the bottom of the hill located near the village and known as "Kel Tepe," at position N 41-39, E 24-09. this was an underground depot 25X1

2. The area covered by this depot is approximately 150 meters square. It is enclosed by a barbed wire fence.
3. Construction of these buildings was started and completed during the fall of 1951. Military units brought in from somewhere in the interior of Bulgaria did the construction work. These same units also excavated many of the trenches around Dospat village and constructed the massive earthworks in these trenches.
4. Two buildings were enclosed in the depot area and were covered with approximately four meters of dirt. Only one story of the buildings was visible above ground. The buildings were about 8 x 8 meters in size. The underground portion was enclosed by stone set in lime-cement and the portion above ground was enclosed by bricks set in lime-cement. The buildings were plastered but not painted and had roofs of red Marseilles tile; they had two windows. The excavated earth was piled around the buildings which, from a distance, looked like ordinary village houses.
5. A dirt road which starts at Dospat and runs along the west side of the barracks of the Border Guard unit in Dospat, skirts the west side of the underground depot and ends near "Dakha" peak, located northeast of Dospat.
